West Porlock is one of the three hamlets which form the parish in which is the market town and seaport of Porlock. It is a charming spot, where this wee little village is situated, its thatched cottages with their red-brick chimneys and old-fashioned casemented windows nestling among trees and overlooking the broad expanse of the Bristol Channel.

Wish you could see
the flowers we have had a very fine
autumn here
and the banks too
are very green
and the trees are all in full leaf
and the flowers
are very bright
and the birds are all here now.

Dr. J. B. Did you get my letter last week, & what are you going to do, coming on into town.
It is not very long since.
The weather has been a trifle cooler, but today is much cooler.
Beck is home today.
He has already seen another doctor. Write soon please.
Yours, D. M. OLLIE. I am sending this to Mr. J. B. in England
